

THOMAS M'GARVEY'S FATE IN HANDS OF JURY

Today

UNBELIEVABLE MADE REAL.
RUSSIA, NEAREST NEIGH-BOR.
WE STILL SPEND.

By Arthur Brisbane—
(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Yesterday in New York, where this was written, millions were waiting for Post and Gatty to land, after flying around the northern half of the world in less than nine days. Mayor Walker had ready a good speech, fine reception and elaborate luncheon. The Post-Gatty achievement will do more to stimulate flying than anything since Lindbergh's feat.

It is hard to realize what it means to fly across the Atlantic ocean, and the European continent, over Siberia, on from Asia to Alaska, and back across the American continent to New York, all in less than nine days. The impossible has been made real.

In connection with the Post-Gatty flight General William Mitchell, head of our fliers during the big war, reminds you how near Russia is to us.

"After Mexico and Canada, Russia is our nearest neighbor. Bering strait, 52 miles wide, is a bridge between Asia and America. Two islands in the middle, called the diomedes, are about six miles apart.
Our territorial waters touch each other."

General Mitchell adds: "Our next nearest neighbor is Japan. The distance from the northernmost Philippine Island, called the Bashee rocks, to Botel Tobago, off the southern end of Formosa, is only 60 miles."

Half the population of the world lives in Asia, and that makes our territorial closeness to that big continent important.

In diplomacy, disarmament conferences, etc., the British easily "put it over" on the United States, Lord Balfour, or MacDonald with equal facility let us know what England wants and then get it.

But when it comes to strict business diplomacy, France can outbid Great Britain and the United States combined.

In connection with President Hoover's moratorium, if France gets what she wants she will continue collecting from Germany, and paying the United States, and the difference in her favor will amount to enough to balance the French budget.

However, the American worm may turn unexpectedly.

Rumors from Paris indicated that the Hoover moratorium may go through, leaving the French out. On that basis France would continue paying the United States and collecting from Germany.

Wall street, recently as nervous as a bride on the wedding morning, did not know quite what to think yesterday. United States steel, which had sadly sagged down to 99, climbed vivaciously upward, to close at 103 1-4.

Wall street expects some happy solution of the moratorium problem.

Bankers tell you that the people draw about $120,000,000 to spend as "extra money" on the Fourth of July.

The banks are able to stand the drain, having more money than they know what to do with anyhow.

And besides, during the month of June this country gathered $153,- 000,000 in gold, the largest amount ever received in one month.

WEEK-END HEAT RELIEF IS SEEN BY FORECASTERS

Cooling Showers Expected Over Northern Part of State

REPORT NUMBER OF PROSTRATIONS

New High Temperature of 105 for Season Recorded Here

With a maximum of 105 reported at the city's sewage disposal plant today, the mercury reached a new peak as the virtually nation wide heat wave continued in full force, with relief reaching only a few points through the midwest.

A number of heat prostrations, principally among employees at the industrial plants of the city, were reported today, two of which were of more than average seriousness.

East Liverpool yesterday saw the thermometer record a mark of 112 degrees in the sun and 102 in the shade.

Weather Observer L. H. Copeland reports temperatures slightly under the 100-mark. The hottest day on record at the Millport station, he says, was Aug. 6, 1918, when the mercury hit 103.

A break in the torrid spell, the Associated Press says, is expected over the week-end, and forecasts were that cooling showers would fall over northern portions of the state tomorrow.

Mine shafts, beaches and parks
—any place to escape the heat—
have been utilized by heat sufferers.
At Akron, tire factories have curtailed operations because laborers were unable to work in the terrific heat of the "pits."

The Mansfield Tire and Rubber company closed its factory at Mansfield at noon today and will remain closed until Monday after about 75 per cent of the employees were affected by the extreme heat.

RELIEF FOR MIDDLEWEST
Entire Area Will be Cooler Tonight,
Weathermen Forecast

Relief came into the middlewest today, as the summer's first heat wave moved into the east and south.

Storms over Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Missouri and other northern and far midwestern states, crept slowly into Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana. By tonight weather men predict this entire area will have found cooler, more normal summer temperatures.

But as the middlewest breathed a sigh of relief, the east and south continued to swelter with the center of the torrid wave moving slowly across Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

While storms broke over several sections, Kentucky and Missouri yesterday, the mercury went down for only a few hours—then bounced up again.

Defiance Reports 107.5
Michigan had temperatures ranging from 98 to 100 with no relief in sight. The maximum was reported to be 107.5 in Defiance, O., yesterday.

MAIL EARLY, TIP AT POSTOFFICE; CHANGES LISTED

Employees' 44-Hour Week Effective Throughout Nation

Do your week-end mailing early!
That's the suggestion today of Salem postoffice authorities, with the new 44-hour week schedule going into effect Saturday throughout the nation as a result of a congressional act approved Feb. 17.

The New Schedule
The following changes in the Saturday routine, will be effective:

There will be one complete delivery of mail and parcel post Saturday morning.

The money order room will close at 1 p. m. instead of 5.

The general delivery and stamp window will close at 5 p. m. instead of 6.

Doors, open until 9 p. m. throughout the week, will close at 8 p. m.
Saturday and 6 p. m. Sunday.

At All Postoffices
Inasmuch as the new Saturday routine is effective at all postoffices with slight variations to meet local conditions, mailers, to insure delivery before Sunday should visit the postoffice early Friday, or, possibly, Thursday night.

The postoffice will be closed Saturday, July 4, in accordance with the holiday custom. There will be no city or rural deliveries and no window service although mails will be received and dispatched.

FILES CHARGES AFTER SHOOTING

East Liverpool Man Accuses D. H. Headley; Latter In Jail

LISBON, July 2.—D. H. Headley, living on a farm in Madison township, is the county jail under bond of $1,500 on a charge of shooting with intent to kill as a result of an affidavit filed by L. D. Lane,
East Liverpool, with Justice C. E.
Albright late last night.

Lane accuses Headley of shooting him in the leg. Lane asserts that he had taken a woman companion to Headley's farm last night so that she might visit with a girl friend whom she wanted to see.

He charged that Headley ordered him off the place. As he started away, Lane declares that Headley fired at him, the bullet inflicting a slight wound in one of his legs.

After treating the wound he notified county authorities and Headley was arrested by Deputy George Hays. Headley pleaded not guilty before Justice Albright and waived a hearing. He is being held for grand jury action.

dle this year. Last year, there

Westphal, pastor and director, announced today. The highest enrollment was 120.

session.

Children from other churches took part in the work, seven denomi-

CHAMP AND FOE SET FOR TITLE BATTLE FRIDAY

Gate Receipts Short Of $600,000 Expected by Promoters

CLEVELAND, July 2.—The world's heavyweight championship battle between Max Schmeling, title holder, and Young Stribling, American challenger, tomorrow night, may be a whale of a success as a fight, but it appeared today the gate receipts would fall far short of the $600,000 the promoters had hitherto expected.

As Schmeling and Stribling moved into Cleveland for their weigh-in tonight, officials of the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Ohio, promoting the contest, were hoping for clear cool weather tomorrow to stimulate the eleventh-hour ticket sale. Predictions were made that with favorable weather, the receipts will be between $300,000 and $400,000 with an attendance of between 40,000 and 60,000 spectators.

Boxers Get $156,000
If the receipts amount to $300,000 net, the figures will show a very slight profit for the Madison Square Garden Corporation for its promotional venture. It is estimated the expenses of the promotion, exclusive of the boxers' share, will amount to $112,000. Figures on the basis of a $300,000 net gate, the boxers' share will amount to about $156,000 or 52 1/2 per cent of the receipts. Schmeling is to receive 40 per cent and Stribling 12 1/2.

Both Schmeling and Stribling completed their assignments in the battle of the ballyhoo yesterday, and started for Cleveland to weigh in at 8:30 p. m. tonight. Stribling and Schmeling are to weigh-in at WTAM, Cleveland radio station, with the National Broadcasting company sending it out on the atmosphere throughout the entire country.

Stribling wound up his training last night without throwing a punch at a sparring partner. Five rounds of work constituted the final practice of the young south-erner before he matches his speed, skill and punching power against the champion. Stribling skipped the rope for a round, slugged a heavy bag for a round, shadow-boxed two rounds and wound up with calisthenics. Before he started his work, he weighed 188 pounds, just the figure he expects to be tomorrow night. The challenger was in high spirits and seemed to be perfectly trained.

ranged for the program by Director

Fliers Accorded Rousing Ovation In Gotham Tour

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 1.—New York and millions who are a part of it, gave two tired men today the spectacular sort of welcome which is reserved for spectacular guests.

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, back in the city after girdling the globe in less than nine days, found New York at its noisiest and at the peak of its enthusiasm. Perched on the cushions of an automobile, they made a circuit of the city which probably was only slightly less exciting than the flight itself.

There were crowds all along the route.

Even before the fliers were out of their beds at 9:30 a. m. a crowd had collected around the doors of the Ritz Carlton hotel, their headquarters. When they finally made their appearance in the lobby, remarking that they had slept "fine," they were applauded by a hundred guests. Outside, 2,000 more persons had collected.

From 25 to 30 children will be taken care of during the season, according to reports, and will be ex-county health commissioner, and county nurses.

Funds for the maintenance of this camp are provided through the

MERCURY SLOWS UP

If there were less of an exciting nature to occupy attention right now, the part trans-Atlantic telephony is playing in the important drama of debt negotiations between the United States and Europe would receive more attention. As it is, the almost instantaneous communication that is piling one development on another with breath-taking rapidity is taken for granted. Comparatively few people realize exactly what it means for President Hoover to be able to communicate privately with Secretary Mellon, or Ambassadors Sackett and Edge in Europe merely by lifting a receiver off a hook. The trans-Atlantic telephone will be firmly established as a means of delivering vitally important diplomatic instructions by the time the negotiations are complete.

Speedier communication with other countries fairly tumbles over itself, so fast it grows. Pictures taken of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty when they landed in Chester, Eng., last Wednesday are being speeded to New York by fast boat. Yet, the two aviators themselves promise to land again at Roosevelt Field after their flight around the world before their pictures are received in this country.

Once, messengers spent months on sailing ships going from one country to another. Then steamships and cables speeded communication. Followed, faster ships, better cable service, and now the trans-Atlantic telephone and the radio. Mercury, the classic symbol of speed, is being forced out of the picture by the dynamo and propeller.

REAPER'S 107TH BIRTHDAY

The story of the grain reaper is the same one told about every new idea. An idea—laborious construction of a working model—the ridicule of skeptics—disappointments—finally success—the approbation of the crowd—handsome offers—and a place in history.

Cyrus McCormick's father, who had invented numerous labor-saving devices, believed a grain-cutting machine would be practical. He failed in his attempts to construct one, however, leaving the opportunity to his son. In 1831—100 years ago—Cyrus took up the problem, and after careful study constructed a grain-cutting machine used successfully in the late harvest that year.

Even in its first crude state the reaper attracted more intelligent farmers who saw it. Others ridiculed it, unable to comprehend its possibilities. It was many years, of course, before the reaper approached its present perfection, but it has been accepted universally for more than a quarter of a century. Each new model has embodied certain refinements; the great "combines" used in western states are the highest development achieved.

The reaper helped create problems, too. The bright sheaves tumbling rapidly off the carriers released thousands of men from the laborious work of cradling the heavy-headed grain by hand. Many farms were abandoned as it became easier and cheaper to produce wheat. The rolling land of the western states invited enterprising farmers to make them the bread basket of the nation. European markets invited huge exports. These things could not have happened without Cyrus McCormick's grain cutter that could sweep over a vast tract of wheat land in a few days doing the work of dozens of men. Few inventions have affected directly the lives of so many human beings.

The reapers are in the fields again, snipping, bunching and tying grain. They are taken for granted now. One hundred years ago, however, their ancestor was only the crazy contraption of a young farmer who would have been better off, his neighbors said, working than trying to figure out a way to avoid work.

NEW NATIONAL HEROES

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, two modest and capable young men who came from nowhere to fly in a 14,000-mile circle around the North Pole, are the nation's new national heroes. To them goes the generous adulation America offers those who perform extraordinary feats. They can make of it what they choose—use it as a stepping stone to a more permanent kind of renown as Charles A. Lindbergh did, or reap the harvest immediately at hand and retire again into obscurity.

The most engaging aspect of the flight is the splendid manner in which the two men mastered fatigue under the most trying flying conditions imaginable. They have faced danger, have held their lives in their hands for hours at a time, surmounted extreme difficulties—have done everything, in short, to fatigue the human brain and body, and yet have shown few signs of strain. When it is considered that 100 miles of driving on a improved road tires many motorists to the point of weakening irritability, the feat of flying around the world in less than 10 days appears almost superhuman.

The practical results of the trip are small. Proof is made available that it can be done, but there is no reason for doing it, other than the adventure. The trans-Atlantic leg of the flight eventually will be flown regularly by commercial planes, but the Asiatic stages will be traversed by few airplanes for many years to come.

It is in achievements like the flight of Post and Gatty that Americans find a vast store of satisfaction. It is another extremely difficult deed attracting world interest that Americans have performed first. America, consequently, is demonstratively proud and happy. That's the American way.

What Others Say

THE CYNIC ERA

Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton university, in his recent baccalaureate sermon, confidently declared to a class of graduates that the "cynic" era is over. He assured them that a decade of criticism has given way to one of construction.

Young folks of the present generation have been prone to criticize and deride traditional authority, customary convention and the received canons of character, he insisted. Those of us who have lived through the last decade can well agree with him. The reactions of the war, the teachings of Karl Marx, the abnormal disillusionments of a new youth, were responsible for the breaking down of ancient saving barriers of society and religion, as well as constitutional governmental barriers.

It is wholesome and encouraging to believe that we have entered upon a period of reconstruction which will spell disillusionment and tend to the banishment of the present cynical view of life.

Dr. Hibben phrases the new declaration of independence as follows: "I will not be told what I must believe or how I ought to act. I will not accept any idea as true unless it is true for me."

This is well enough in so far as it has served to expose or sweep aside sham, hypocrisies, political inaptitude, theological formulas, social and respectable insincerity; but let it be hoped, as Dr. Hibben believes, that this extreme critical period has passed and that we now are entering upon a period of reconstruction of the ideas by which the present decade must live. To build up, not tear down—to create and not destroy—is the key to this educator's philosophy of life. It is not a new one, but a better formula never yet has been offered to man by any sage of the world.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

For Friday, July 3
Notable Nativities: Sam Bernard, comedian.

Judging by the lunar transits, this should be a very active and happy day, with many gestures of gaiety and social festivity. There is likely to be much stirring about, with travel and change, under a favorable Uranian ray. The labor or industry engaged in may have the effect of stability and responsibility, especially in the good graces of elderly persons or institutions. Nevertheless, employment is under an adverse aspect and may give some concern.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which the personal relations and activities may claim paramount attention. Social, domestic and affectional matters may be lively and give much happiness, as well as incite much movement, involving travel, change and new environment. With practical and diligent effort, there may be much solid progress made, but be cautious not to give offense to employers or those in authority. A child born on this day should be industrious, skilful, ingenious and original, and likewise popular and well equipped in social graces.

NEW YORK, July 2—It is axiomatic that the most influential citizen is not only the easiest for the reporter to see but to interview. Austerity slides away at the journalistic approach. Col. Lindbergh, truly and deservedly great, is a notable exception.

Reporters have cooled their heels in the outer offices of suddenly elevated upstarts and been immediately ushered into the presence of Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Jr. and Chauncey Depew. This courtesy does not exist solely in commercial fields.

It applies to great actors, top-notch authors, poets and painters. On his recent visit Gilbert K. Chesterton won the good will of all the journalists—from ship news crew to the touring correspondents—by his graciousness. And in return he received thoughtful consideration.

Maud Adams would not see reporters but her decisions were amiable. She was never abrupt. If letters were sent asking an interview they were invariably answered politely. It was explained interviews were never granted. Her wishes were respected by reporters and by photographers.

It is the insolvent person who finds the going rough with the newspaper crowd. Once they have been treated discourteously they are like the elephant aggravated. They never forget. And often this resentment is carried on for years in a conspiracy of silence.

Irvin Cobb's story, "The Thunder of Silence" was based on the actual experience of the life of a Washington statesman. He not only snubbed correspondents but did not treat them fairly in news conferences. He was shamed to oblivion by being completely ignored.

The only vigorous opposition I ever met in interviewing was with a young cub in Dayton, O. My city editor sent me to question a rather prominent citizen who had married and chambered a fifty nautilus for his mother's former parlor maid. At the first question he leapt from his desk, shook me as the terrier does the rat and sent me spinning into a corner. That experience focused all my ambitions on ultimately doing only inside work.

The most agreeable interview I ever had was with the British humorist Jerome K. Jerome. He not only furnished me with a couple of crack anecdotes applicable to the times but when the piece appeared dropped a complimentary note to the publisher about it that won a $2 weekly rise. And did I need it!

In the mail today from a gracious gentleman in Florida, a broken hour glass as a souvenir. I had no idea it could prove so fascinating. The rhythm of its soft flow, but something of great beauty, but there is a touch monotonously solemn in its drift. It seems to symbolize many present human activities—a useless rushing along into stagnation. The hum of a big bottle fly epitomizes the same futility. The tick of a clock expresses the passing of time but is cheerful about it. And now that I've got myself all smoked up musing this way I'm about half mad at my new hour glass.

The season has been toughest in history along the Rialto. In every block in Broadway environs one stumbles into groups of well-known players at liberty. They try to be casual, sometimes farcical, about it, but the pace is beginning to produce a race strained look. Most of them drift from Lindy's to Ma Gerson's to the curb of the Palace and various coffee pots, drowning despair in cauldrons of java. This afternoon I encountered a monologist on 7th avenue. "Laying off this week?" I inquired. "This week?" he replied. "Name any week!"

The hang-outs of theatrical folk are always engaging. I usually seek them when dining out. Actors express the human frailties most of us would like to indulge but lack the courage. It is their easy mode of living more than their acting that supplies the magic of the theatre to me. I get a kick just following George M. Cohan around in the manner of the dog after the covered wagon.

I dropped over to clip my bond today and found it in another sinking spell, and breathing heavily. Powerful influences seem to be keeping that bond from amounting to anything. I'm beginning to suspect Morgan and that crowd.

Dear France: Wouldn't it be better to give the debt a holiday than to have it lie down forever on the job?—Boston Transcript.

Glandular Extracts As Builders
Primitive man believed his courage would be made greater by eating the heart of his enemy.

Today modern medicine advocates the internal use of certain glandular extracts. In fact, some of the authorities claim that certain glands are capable of controlling age and that others possess powers of rejuvenation. The hopeful scientists think it may become possible to vent the uncomfortable physical changes of advancing life from taking place.

These chemical substances, produced by the glands of the human body, are spoken of as "internal secretions" or "hormones." From these organs, they are carried by the blood to other parts of the body and are used as needed.

These substances have been definitely isolated. They are known to be secreted from certain glands with big names, notably the pineal, pituitary, thyroid, parathyroid, thymus and adrenal glands. In addition, it is known that the pancreas, stomach, upper intestines and other glands secrete similar substances, likewise known as hormones.

In some diseases, there is a deficiency in the secretion of one or more of the hormones. When this happens, there is trouble. For instance, when the thyroid gland fails to supply the normal amount of its internal secretion, we have an uncomfortable physical condition, spoken of as "myxedema." It is startling to observe the favorable effect of giving an extract of thyroid gland in this disease.

This is only one example of what the administration of a glandular substance by mouth may do to promote at favorable change in the welfare of an individual. I wish space permitted giving you other examples.

Of course, there are numerous claims made that are unauthorized. There is too much unscientific literature on this subject.

Unless your physician recommends or subscribes a certain glandular remedy, you should not take it. It may be of no value whatsoever, or it may be harmful.

SECRET PLACES

Synopsis of Preceding Installments:

Feodor Staire, attached to the British Embassy in Paris, after serving in Madrid, was wealthy, was determined to make his way in the diplomatic world, was unmarried, and was bored by the modern young girl. On his 36th birthday he was on the Calais train, bound for London, when he met his old friend, Ronald Halkett, who seven months before had married the beautiful Greta Wareham, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham, who lived in Paris. Ronald mentioned his sister-in-law, Toni, but Staire was not interested. Then he was attracted to her when he saw her hand a little pet dog from beneath a limousine in London and later when he saw her riding in the Row. Soon after her return to Paris, she went on a visit to the United States. In the meantime, Greta had met the Comte Henri D'Arblay, who although received in the American colony in Paris, did not bear a very good reputation. Toni, who was about 21, met Staire on her return, at a dinner party given in a Paris restaurant. Greta had told Ronald she had a headache and did not wish to go but Toni met her unexpectedly in the cloakroom. Greta told her she had come with D'Arblay, Toni, who considered herself hard-boiled, danced with Feodor and was instantly attracted to him. When Feodor saw D'Arblay was a wealthy South American, who pretended to be a Frenchman. They danced again and Staire made an engagement for luncheon the next day in the country. They were engaged when they returned in the evening and Toni asked Feodor to meet her with her mother's party that night at the charity ball at the Opera.

INSTALLMENT IV
"Of course I'll come," Staire told Toni. "Do you imagine I would stay away if you wanted me? Look out for me near the serious affairs. Do you realize that your mother will be a little surprised to put the matter mildly?"

"It takes a lot to surprise mother where I'm concerned, and she loves Ronnie as if he were her son, and you are Ronnie's closest and oldest friend. She'll be pleased."

"I hope so," he said gravely. "If she does not think I am too old for you, Toni, it's a big step."

"I never could bear boys," Toni retorted. "They're fatuous. They're raw. And I am marrying you, not mother—Besides, just now Greta is taking up all the maternal attention."

"She's being rather indiscreet—nothing in it, you know, but she's so lovely that she's conspicuous."

"She is lovely," he agreed and fell silent, his last night's anxiety for Ronald coming back into his mind. As if she guessed his thoughts Toni spoke in her old impetuous manner.

"Last night I wouldn't have let you know, but today, now, it's different. You'll be in the family. Greta is upsetting Ronald by going about so much with D'Arblay. Last night I pretended I didn't know. Ronnie was furious last night."

"It's a pity," Staire agreed, but said no more, and as he drew up the car outside No. 36, he forgot Ronald and Ronald's affairs in view of his own immediate concerns.

It was almost the first time he had been inside Toni's home, and as the butler, greeter, and elderly and stout, let them in, Staire realized anew what a beautiful setting it made for the woman who was her mother. The salon, a long spacious room with two large windows, each leading from a little raised platform that ran along that side of the room, was full of the afternoon sunshine, and the shadow of dancing leaves from the trees outside lay across the Aubusson carpet, a lovely room in shape and color, and filled with lovely things. The dining-room Toni showed him was beyond the closed double doors of glass at one end, and at the other, on one side of the stone fireplace, a door led into her mother's dressing-room. Across the wide hall was a library and her own bedroom, and beyond again other rooms and various corridors, the whole apartment spacious and beautiful.

Mildly was just back from her luncheon engagement, Henri, the butler informed Toni. She would be disengaged in one moment, and Toni seated herself on the arm of Feodor's chair and blew smoke rings into the air with a little gesture of defiance—not that defiance was needed—for Lady Alice, who knew far more about Staire than her daughter, was very delightful to him, and did not even warn him against Toni's impetuosity—a forbearance that made Toni turn on her swiftly when Staire had gone a few minutes later.

"Mother! Why didn't you tell me I was rushing my fences?" Lady Alice stood still for a moment, then she came across the room and put a hand on either side of Toni's face.

"Because for once, odd though it may sound, I do not think you are, Toni dear." Her voice was very gentle, her eyes sympathetic. "You love this man, I think," and at Toni's wordless nod, she held her very close for a minute then released her and drew back.

"I'm delighted dear, and Feodor Staire is a most attractive man. Now sit down and tell me your plans, if you have any."

Toni had hardly finished talking before Greta strolled in, nodded to them both, and said: "May I use the telephone, mother?" and strolled away again to the library where the instrument was; whereupon Toni, suddenly remembering Feodor's promise about the ball at the Opera, determined to ask her if she were going, and did so when she returned.

"Yes, with the Delvilles," Greta's tone was nonchalant. "Why?"

"Is Ronnie?"

"No. He's busy tonight. You're going, I suppose?"

"Yes. Mother's got a party."

"Who?"

"The Hardwickes and Col. James, and the Comte and Comtesse de Verillane and Feodor Staire."

"Feodor Staire," Greta echoed, and for an appreciable second she stood quite still, then stooping took a cigarette from a box and lit it.

"I didn't know you knew Feodor Staire until last night," she said.

"Is he—attached—already?"

Toni ignored the little sneer that came so strangely from that lovely mouth; she could afford to do so. "More or less," she answered, with elaborate carelessness; "more, in the near future, I hope. I am going to marry him."

"What?"

"This time there was no mistaking Greta's amazement, for she swung round and stared at her sister. "You're joking!"

"Why?"

"You don't know him. It's absurd—"

"It's true. You're being absurd, Greta. Why shouldn't I marry Feodor Staire?"

Toni's voice held a note of anger, and Lady Alice interposed to save further unpleasantness.

"It is quite true, Greta. After all, we know a good deal about Feodor Staire from Ronald, and I have met him several times in the past year. I am quite satisfied."

Greta pressed out the half-smoked cigarette and looked up at her sister.

"You are a fast worker," she said. "I hope you won't find it work for nothing."

"Which means you hope I will—ch, well, what do I care? See you tonight!" And pursing her lips to a whistle and doing elaborate Charleston steps Toni quitted the room, leaving Lady Alice alone with her elder daughter; whereupon Greta dropped her slender length into a chair.

"Toni's impossible! The idea of her marrying Feodor Staire is preposterous! He'll be tired of her in a month."

"My dear Greta," for once Lady Alice's tone was severe, "your constant criticism of Toni only reacts on yourself. Is Ronald so content with your latest—crazy—that you can throw stones at your sister?"

The color deepened faintly in Greta's face.

"I fail to see why you should consider D'Arblay a craze. He dances well and he is amusing. Why should Ronald object?"

"I think he does, and I certainly do, although it is not exactly my affair now. D'Arblay is not the right sort of man."

"Oh—absurd!" Greta's impatience passed the bounds of good manners. "Don't be ridiculous. Mother, he's a man of the world. That's all. Do you expect a saint?"

Yet an hour or two later when Ronald—detained by his work in the office of L'Etoile, Gerald Astley's paper—telephoned to his flat in Passy, Greta's answer was charmingly reassuring.

"Oh no, darling. The Delvilles, yes. D'Arblay may be there—he's usually at the big shows, isn't he, but I'm with the Delvilles' party. You need not be in the least jealous. Stupid—you know I adore you."

Ronald hung up the receiver with a sigh quickly checked, and went on with his work; but he knew Greta, her wilfulness, the danger of her great beauty, and her absorption in herself. He was not afraid she would go too far with any of the fascinated men who hovered around her; she was innately cold, and an adept at taking much and giving little; none knew her better than he how difficult it was ever to rouse her to any real warmth, or to move her either by passion or anger. Nothing gave her quite so much pleasure as the contemplation of herself and her social successes. She had no the temperament that is carried away by generous response or unwise warmth of feeling; Ronald had no need to feel real jealousy, but what he did feel was a soreness that she could so easily go against his wishes, and a sick disappointment that she, so lovely, so thoroughbred, could enjoy the society of such a man as Henri D'Arblay.

Toni opened her eyes one morning about a week later and lay in comfortable, drowsy luxury between waking and sleeping, wondering why she felt so extraordinarily happy. She had been used, this last week, to waking up happy, but today seemed even better than usual, and she wondered why, and then suddenly remembered that tonight was to be the big dinner party that her mother was giving to celebrate her engagement, and that on the morrow they were leaving Paris for Lady Alice's house in Brittany. Toni was very modern; she adored Paris, she adored the excitement of town life; but she also adored the chateau in the park above the river, with its terraces, its garden, its animals and the delightful house-park. It would be so new, so extraordinarily wonderful this year because Feodor would come there. Feodor and she would wander about those lovely gardens together... and, at the thought... Toni suddenly sat up, tossing back her fair, short hair.

"I believe I'm old-fashioned," she said aloud in a tone of horror. "I'm sentimental. I'm terribly in love. I intend to be a good wife... oh damn! I must be getting old, or what's the matter? Does everybody change when they fall in love?"

Her voice, which had been louder than she intended, aroused the attention of her maid, who was in the next room, and as Marie came in, smiling at Toni, who she worshipped, she said: "Did Mademoiselle call me?"

Toni shook her head.

"No I didn't call you, Marie; but it's time I got up. What is the time? Half-past nine! Oh, mon Dieu! And I've got a dozen things to do. My hair's got to be washed at eleven. My bath quickly, Marie! Why didn't you wake me before?"

"Madame said you were to be left in peace as long as possible," Marie said. "You were tired last night, mademoiselle, you had had an exciting time, and today—today is more exciting than ever."

Marie, like all French women, adored a romance. She thought that Toni's love affair was the most wonderful she had ever known, and she equally adored Feodor, who was always charming in his manner to those who served him.

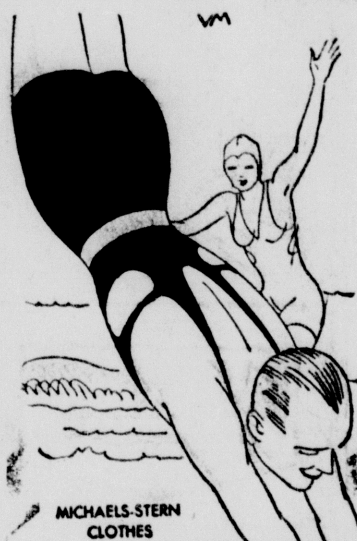

Toni had not yet gotten used to the fact that Feodor Staire was a great personality in the social and diplomatic world, but she did thrill every time she realized that he loved her, and she loved him. It was all so wonderful, it was like a fairy tale, and she looked down with an air of pitying contempt on one or two friends who happened to be engaged to men more or less their own age.

MARKET AWAITS DEBT OUTCOME

Stocks Advance Cautiously; Trading Generally Quiet

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 2.—Stocks advanced cautiously today after a little hesitancy. Trading was quiet, for professional and other traders were reluctant to increase their activity while the Paris debt negotiations were still in an inconclusive stage, but the market continued to act as though it expected an agreement would be reached.
U. S. Steel, after sagging nearly a point, rallied to 104½. They were rallies of two points or more in Worthington Pump, Johns-Manville, Beatrice Creamery and Caterpillar Tractor. Steels, as a group, improved and most of the trading favorites moved up at least one point. General Electric, which was quiet, called money renewed at 1½ per cent.

THE DAY In Sports

Young Stribling, American heavyweight, finished his training here last night in preparation for his world's championship battle with Max Schmeling in the Cleveland stadium Friday evening.

For six weeks the big boy from the south has been working in the big amusement park, fitting himself for his first chance at the world's heavyweight boxing crown. Ten years in the game, during which he fought through the ranks of all classes, placed him at the top of his profession. Countless battles have taught him the tricks of the trade and the ability to give and take it. Experience both in and out of the ring has developed him into a man ready to face the world and all it has to offer on demand.

Workouts Impressive
The workouts here have impressed boxing critics and mere fans with Stribling's ability inside the ropes. He did not need all the work he has had here. Three weeks would have given him plenty of time to condition himself for the title bout. But he worked longer to satisfy the boxing writers who wanted to see him, and for the fans who crowded into the park here night after night.

Stribling is ready. He isn't over-trained. He isn't irritable and worried. He's 188 pounds of solid, swift-moving bone and muscle, with the coolest fighting brain in the boxing world. He's a big, tough, intelligent battler, ready to go.

Regardless of what various writers have said, Stribling has no set plan for the championship scrap. Of course, if he gets a chance to clip the German he'll do it in a hurry. But Stribling plans to campaign as the occasion demands. He wants to win in a hurry—no doubt about that. And his training camp tactics show that he has a pretty fair idea of what blows he feels will bother Maxie. A lightning left jab and that famous left hook have been perfected as never before. A swishing right to the kidneys has caused many a sparring mate to hold on.

Wants To Land K. O.
The dream nearest Stribling's heart is to win the championship by a knockout. He realizes Schmeling's tough but has confidence in his own hitting ability. He likes George Blake as the referee; he likes the site for the bout; he is satisfied with his condition. Young Stribling, the American challenger, is ready.

Klein On Hitting Rampage As Phils Trounce Cubs, 11-3; Triple Play Features Clash

By ORLO ROBERTSON

Associated Press Sports Writer

The Phillies may not be headed any place in particular in the National league race but leave it to that bunch of hard hitting youngsters to produce some of the greatest thrills of the game.

Yesterday they defeated the Chicago Cubs, 11 to 6, which has been done before, but the manner in which they accomplished the feat was new. Chuck Klein blasted his way to the top of the league batting averages with his 21st home run, a triple, a double and a single, while three of his teammates—Mallon, Friberg and Bartell—were pulling the first triple play of the National league season.

Giants Nose Out Cards

Philadelphia's victory over the Cubs featured the National league program which included the Giants' 4 to 3 defeat of the Cards, the conquering of the Reds by Brooklyn, 3 to 1, and the Pirates' second victory of the series with the Braves by the score of 4 to 1.

Home runs played an important part in the Giants' triumph. Johnny Vergez' tenth circuit drive with Travis Jackson on base put the Giants out in front, while Lindstrom's four bagger added another run in the sixth. Pepper Martin kept the Cards in the battle with a home run.

The Reds outthit the Robins, 10 to 8, but Joe Shaute tightened up in the pinches while the Robins held to the advantage given by Babe Herman's home run in the first inning.

Once again the St. Louis Browns stepped in and widened the gap between the Athletics and Senators in the American league. The Browns defeated the Senators 4 to 3 in a game cut to seven innings by rain while the world champions and Lefty Grove were eking out a 4 to 3 decision over the Indians and Wesley Ferrell. The defeat shoved the Senators four and one-half games behind the Mackmen.

Their First Meeting

It was the first time Grove and Ferrell had opposed each other and the Athletics' speed ball artist had slightly the better of the argument.

The New York Yankees bunched four hits with an error to score three runs in the third and eventually beat the Tigers 4 to 2. Art Herring allowed the Yanks only seven hits but he couldn't keep them scattered while three double plays helped Herb Pennock.

Jack Russell just lasted to let the Boston Red Sox defeat the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 3. Until the ninth Russell had allowed only three hits but four safe blows in the last frame were good for two runs and the tying run was on base as he forced McKain, a pinchhitter, to ground out.

SUN, OLD MAN PAR JOIN HANDS AS OPEN BEGINS

U. S., British Golfers Get Off Today In Annual Competition

By ALAN GOULD,

Associated Press Sports Editor

TOLEDO, O., July 2—Old man par and old sol, his newly acquired ally in the business of making things tougher for the golfing clan, furnished a blistering battle ground today for the first round of the United States open championship.

Par has been knocked down for the count a number of times in practice in the inferno of inerness but it has been manifesting increased resistance, with the cooperation of the alfalfa off the fairways and the dripping onslaughts of the heat wave, which scored a 97 in the shade yesterday.

Par Conceded Edge

Thus fortified, the old man of the links was conceded a slight edge over the field of 144 contestants slated to play 18 holes today, another round Friday with the ranks out to about sixty for the final 36 holes Saturday. Since 1923, there has been a play-off every odd year and 1931 may keep up the record.

With the best professional talent of the United States and Great Britain fully equipped with umbrellas, ice packs and cold water bags, besides the main implements of war, the popular guess was that 290 for the 72 hole route would be plenty good enough to win. Par is 71 over this comparatively short course, but very well trapped an hazardous course. Four par rounds would clip the U. S. open record of 286.

Stamina Main Factor

Under the conditions, stamina and resistance to the effect of the terrific heat figured to be as important as the ability to stick to the fairways. For the Baker's dozen of British contestants, most of them veterans, unused to such strength sapping weather and already feeling its effects, the situation was especially discouraging.

The heat and a knee injury combined to convince Charles Whitcombe, captain of the British Ryder cup team, that his place was on the side lines with Jones, Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, two veteran Britons threatened to withdraw today if there was no let-up in sight.

Score 8 Runs In Last 3 Frames; Early Stars In Relief Role

Battin All Stars pulled one out of the fire last night when, at Centennial park in a special engagement with Sebring, the Quakers combine, trailing by seven markers at the end of the fifth, rallied in the sixth to score three times and delivered the final punch in the eighth with a five-run onslaught to nose out the visitors, 11 to 10.

The Battin stars were outthit, 13 to 8, but those bingles the Quakers garnered in the sixth and the eighth counted for enough runs to cop.

Camp was the Battin slab selection but the Sebringites got to his slants for 11 safeties and 10 runs in the first three frames.

Early went in as relief twirler and pitched steady ball for five and one-third cantos, during which the visitors got but two safe swats.

Sartick and Miller led the social sluggers, the former with three raps and the latter with two. R. Lee, Rinali, Denmark and T. Lee clouded well for the opposition.

NEW PLYMOUTHS TESTED RIGIDLY

Driven Miles Upon Miles
In Desert Heat and
Mountain Chills

In addition to laboratory experiments to test the reliability, sturdiness and general excellence of the new Plymouth with Floating Power, being shown this week for the first time at Chrysler, De Soto and Dodge dealers here, Plymouth test engineers proved these points by submitting the car to every trial known to automotive science.

Tests Are Made
At the engineering laboratories, parts such as radiators, exhaust pipes, springs, rubber mountings and the assembled cars were shaken, pounded, twisted or rotated literally thousands upon thousands of times by specially designed testing equipment to disclose any weaknesses. Then, more than a dozen experimental cars were sent out with highly trained test drivers, who put thousands of miles on them in and around Detroit and on the steep mountain grades near Ligonier, Pa.

As a fitting climax to this comprehensive series of tests, the first two production cars were sent west on a 10,000-mile journey, in which every condition of weather and road that a motorist will encounter was experienced.

From Detroit these new Plymouths went to the alkali wastes of Death Valley, 333 feet below sea level and bounded by the Panamint Amargosa and Funeral mountain ranges. Not a breath of air stirred in this forgotten region and the normal temperature is around 124 degrees Fahrenheit.

From Heat to Chills
In this uninhabited, difficult terrain, the new Plymouths were driven mile upon mile in order to confirm engineering specifications for cooling, proper functioning of the water and oil circulation systems, adequate crankcase ventilation and proper air cleaner design for excluding the alkali dust with its penetrating and destroying abrasive action on moving parts.

From the intense heat of this desert waste, the new Plymouths climbed the ten-mile grade up to the heights of nearby Mt. Wilson. Thus, within the space of a few hours, these cars were required to function in the 124-degree heat of Death Valley and in the 40-degree chill of the mountain peak above the clouds.

GROVE CITY, PA. — Two small animals resembling kit-foxes with hind legs and tails similar to rabbits, are owned by Boyd Baker, near here. The animals are tame. They hop about like rabbits. One is gray in color, the other striped.

Today's Pattern

Ideal for summer wear, this frock fashioned of a sheer print and smartly styled to include three of fashion's newest details—the draped neckline, the capelet sleeves cut in one with the bodice, and the graceful, side skire flares. Any wonder the model is charming? You'll find the tiny tucks at back neck and waistline a tremendous help in fitting the dress. Pattern 2109 makes up beautifully in georgette, chiffon, voile, dimity, batiste or flat crepe. Obtainable only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 1-2 yards of 39 inch fabric. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

COUPON
This pattern will be delivered upon receipt of 15c. coin or stamps, carefully wrapped. Latest Fashion Book 10c. Send all orders to SALEM NEWS PATTERN DEPARTMENT, 243 WEST 17TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeannette Young Norton

Memorable Sweet Corn

But that's one culinary lapse that can't be fastened to the much-maligned cook. Corn-on-cob is one of those foods that should be cooked and served within an hour after picking. That's why the farm corn of so many childhoods is the memorable, best-in-the-world corn. Mother put the kettle on and when the water boiled she demanded that someone go out and pick the corn.

Corn begins to lose its sweetness and flavor the moment it is taken off the stalk. No matter how fine in appearance or size, any corn that has been traveling away from its native heat for a week or two cannot have the fine flavor of the freshly picked variety.

However, what with present improved methods of rapid shipping from market to consumer, even the city dweller has a chance of getting corn almost as good as the resident of the rural districts. Choose corn carefully. The ears should be wellfilled to the tip end, with few missing kernels, and they should look milky. Glossy kernels, or a few withered kernels, are a sign of stale corn—not worth cooking.

To prepare corn-on-cob, first set the water to boil and use plenty of it. Meanwhile, remove husk, stem and silk. Throw into boiling water and cook only until tender. No general timetable can be given, as it depends on the size and age of the corn. But it should be tested for tenderness with a pointed knife every few minutes, and removed the moment it is tender. Some cook corn for only five to eight minutes—but it may take longer. The fact is, corn-on-cob needs watching, and under no circumstances should it be overcooked. As soon as tender, remove from water, pile onto a napkin in a deep platter and keep hot this way until ready to serve—which should be immediately.

TARNOV, NEB.—St. Michael's church here has celebrated its golden jubilee. The present structure was dedicated in 1910. Rt. Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, bishop of Omaha, officiated at the jubilee exercises.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Washing The Carpets and Rugs

Any good rug may be cleaned by the soap-and-water method, with a few cautions. First, make sure it is a closely woven rug, of such good quality that a soap treatment won't injure colors. Second, it must be remembered that washing rugs means scrubbing them with soap and water, not immersing them in a bath.

The rug can be placed on top of a firm table. Make a thick suds of white soap and lukewarm water. Dip a stiff brush in the solution and scrub a small section at a time. Rinse with clear, warm water by dipping a large cloth in it, and gently absorbing the suds from the rug. Renew both suds and clear water frequently. The rug should not be scrubbed with dark suds. When the entire rug is so treated, hang up to dry, right side up. If the rug has been carefully cleaned the back will not be wringing wet—merely damp.

When thoroughly dry the rug can be given a once-over with a clean, stiff bristle brush to bring the nap into shape again.

Before washing any kind of rug or carpet it should be given a very thorough cleaning with vacuum cleaner, carpet sweeper or broom so that all the surface dust is completely dislodged. The better this preliminary job is done the less arduous will be the moist scrubbing later.

Rug rugs can stand a complete bath, and a trip to the commercial laundry is not expensive and won't hurt the average rug. However, if it must be done at home it can be immersed in the washing machine, of if that is not available then the same scrub brush method that is used for other rugs will do. As soaking doesn't hurt rag rugs they can be rinsed easily by throwing pails of water over them in the tub. Do not wring out. Hang outdoors while dripping wet, but well rinsed and they will dry in good shape.

Reunited After 27 Years

A touching reunion, but a happy one, took place on the S. S. Portland at San Francisco when a 60-year-old Russian woman met two of her sons for the first time in 27 years. She had spent years trying to get a passport from the Russian government, saw her husband die of disappointment, and after great suffering arrived in the U. S. to find two grown-up sons who were mere lads when she last saw them. The mother, Mrs. Lazar Lachman, and her two sons, Maurice (left) and Maurine (right), are shown above.

MOVIES

COMING ATTRACTION

At The State

The same qualifications which made Richard Dix's portrayal of "Yancey Cravat" memorable in the epochal "Cimarron," carry him to equally great heights in the dramatic "Young Donovan's Kid," the coming attraction at the State theater.

As "Jim Donovan," gang leader in this adaptation of Rex Beach's "Big Brother," Dix gives an inspired performance. Just as the personality of the star was made to order for "Yancey Cravat," so the character of Donovan must have been drawn from the star's own rugged character, so perfectly does he fit into the part of this man of gang-land.

Jackie is cast as Midge Murray, waif of the streets who is entrusted to the care of Donovan, and who ultimately assists in the reformation of the gangster. The fact that Jackie successfully steps from his high comedy "Skipper" characterization to the dramatic demands in this role marks him as a sterling actor.

TODAY'S FEATURES

At The State

"Gold Dust Gertie" with Winnie Lightner and Olson and Johnson is at the State today.

Winnie Lightner, who is living up to the record she made as Mabel, in "Gold Diggers of Broadway," is more ludicrously likeable as Gertie, than in any of her other comedies. She is shown in violent pursuit of two newswomen, who have been former husbands, and owe her alimony.

Olson and Johnson, as may be imagined, are the grooms in question. They are first seen in the heyday of their honeymoon which is unceremoniously upset, when the twin wives discover the duns Winnie sends for her pay. The wives, played with a keen sense for comedy, are portrayed by Dorothy Christy and Vivian Oakland.

"TRADER HORN"

At The Grand

"Trader Horn," much heralded filmization of the remarkable book which became a best seller overnight, will be shown four days at the grand theater.

This picture, filmed over a period of months in the African jungles, is believed to set a precedent for the unusual and thrilling. At the risk of their lives, Harry Carey, Edwina Booth, Duncan Renaldo, Olive Golden and hordes of natives employed as "extras" depicted the exciting scenes which were so vividly described by Aloysius Horn.

Sequences include a weird native death dance, preceding the roasting to death of alien captives; a battle to death of lions fighting over a slaughtered prey; a breathtaking closeup of a lion pierced to the brain by the expert hurling of a staff; the snapping up of a native by hungry crocodiles; and hundreds of "shots" revealing strange creatures of the Dark Continent in intimate action.

THOMAS M'GARVEY'S FATE IN HANDS OF JURY

Today

UNBELIEVABLE MADE REAL.
RUSSIA, NEAREST NEIGHBOR.
WE STILL SPEND.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Yesterday in New York, where this was written, millions were waiting for Post and Gatty to land, after flying around the northern half of the world in less than nine days. Mayor Walker had ready a good speech, fine reception and elaborate luncheon. The Post-Gatty achievement will do more to stimulate flying than anything since Lindbergh's feat.

It is hard to realize what it means to fly across the Atlantic ocean, and the European continent, over Siberia, from Asia to Alaska, and back across the American continent to New York, all in less than nine days. The impossible has been made real.

In connection with the Post-Gatty flight General William Mitchell, head of our fliers during the big war, reminds you how near Russia is to us.

"After Mexico and Canada, Russia is our nearest neighbor. Bering strait, 52 miles wide, is a bridge between Asia and America. Two islands in the middle, called the diomedes, are about six miles apart. Our territorial waters touch each other."

General Mitchell adds: "Our next nearest neighbor is Japan. The distance from the northernmost Philippine Island, called the Bashiue rocks, to Boto Tobago, off the southern end of Formosa, is only 60 miles."

Half the population of the world lives in Asia, and that makes our territorial closeness to that big continent important.

In diplomacy, disarmament conferences, etc., the British easily "put it over" on the United States, Lord Balfour or MacDonald with equal facility let us know what England wants and then get it.

But when it comes to strict business diplomacy, France can outwit Great Britain, and the United States combined.

In connection with President Hoover's Moratorium, if France gets what she wants she will continue collecting from Germany, and paying the United States, and the difference in her favor will amount to enough to balance the French budget.

However, the American worm may turn unexpectedly.

Rumors from Paris indicated that the Hoover moratorium may go through, leaving the French out. On that basis France would continue paying the United States and collecting from Germany.

Wall street, recently as nervous as a bride on the wedding morn, did not know quite what to think yesterday. United States steel, which had sadly sagged down to 99, climbed vivaciously upward, to close at 103 1-4.

Wall street expects some happy solution of the moratorium problem.

Bankers tell you that the people draw about $120,000,000 to spend as "extra money" on the Fourth of July.

The banks are able to stand the drain, having more money than they know what to do with anyhow. And besides, during the month of June this country gathered $153,000,000 in gold, the largest amount ever received in one month.

WEEK-END HEAT RELIEF IS SEEN BY FORECASTERS

Cooling Showers Expected Over Northern Part of State

REPORT NUMBER OF PROSTRATIONS

New High Temperature of 105 for Season Recorded Here

With a maximum of 105 reported at the city's sewage disposal plant today, the mercury reached a new peak as the virtually nation wide heat wave continued in full force, with relief reaching only a few points through the middle west.

A number of heat prostrations, principally among employees at the industrial plants of the city, were reported today, two of which were of more than average seriousness.

East Liverpool yesterday saw the thermometer record a mark of 112 degrees in the sun and 102 in the shade.

Weather Observer L. H. Copeland reports temperatures slightly under the 100-mark.

The hottest day on record at the Millport station, he says, was Aug. 6, 1918, when the mercury hit 103.

A break in the torrid spell, the Associated Press says, is expected over the week-end, and forecasts that cooling showers would fall over northern portions of the state tomorrow.

Mine shafts, beaches and parks—any place to escape the heat—have been utilized by heat sufferers.

At Akron, tire factories have curtailed operations because laborers were unable to work in the terrific heat of the "pits."

The Mansfield Tire and Rubber company closed its factory at Mansfield at noon today and will remain closed until Monday after about 75 per cent of the employees were affected by the extreme heat.

RELIEF FOR MIDDLEWEST

Entire Area Will be Cooler Tonight, Weathermen Forecast

Relief came into the middle west today, as the summer's first heat wave moved into the east and south.

Storms over Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Missouri and other northern and far middlewestern states, crept slowly into Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana. By tonight weather men predict this entire area will have found cooler, more normal summer temperatures.

But as the middle west breathed a sigh of relief, the east and south continued to swelter with the center of the torrid wave moving slowly across Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

While storms broke over several sections of Kentucky and Missouri yesterday, the mercury went down for only a few hours—then bounced up again.

Defiance Reports 107.5

Michigan had temperatures ranging from 98 to 100 with no relief in sight. The maximum was reported to be 107.5 in Defiance, O., yesterday.

MAIL EARLY, TIP AT POSTOFFICE; CHANGES LISTED

Employees' 44-Hour Week Effective Throughout Nation

Do your week-end mailing early! That's the suggestion today of Salem postoffice authorities, with the new 44-hour week schedule going into effect Saturday throughout the nation as a result of a congressional act approved Feb. 17.

The new schedule

The following changes in the Saturday routine, will be effective:

There will be one complete delivery of mail and parcel post Saturday morning.

The money order room will close at 1 p. m. instead of 5.

The general delivery and stamp window will close at 5 p. m. instead of 6.

Doors, open until 9 p. m. through out the week, will close at 8 p. m. Saturday and 6 p. m. Sunday.

At All Postoffices

Inasmuch as the new Saturday routine is effective at all postoffices with slight variations to meet local conditions, mailers, to insure delivery before Sunday should visit the postoffice early Friday, or, possibly, Thursday night.

The postoffice will be closed Saturday, July 4, in accordance with the holiday custom. There will be no city or rural deliveries and no window service although mails will be received and dispatched.

FILES CHARGES AFTER SHOOTING

East Liverpool Man Accuses D. H. Headley; Latter In Jail

LISBON, July 2.—D. H. Headley, living on a farm in Madison township, is the county jail under bond of $1,500 on a charge of shooting with intent to kill as a result of an affidavit filed by L. D. Lane, East Liverpool, with Justice C. E. Albright last night.

Lane accuses Headley of shooting him in the leg. Lane asserts that he had taken a woman companion to Headley's farm last night so that she might visit with a girl friend whom she wanted to see.

He charged that Headley ordered him off the place. As he started away, Lane declares that Headley fired at him, the bullet inflicting a slight wound in one of his legs.

After treating the wound he notified county authorities and Headley was arrested by Deputy George Hays. Headley pleaded not guilty before Justice Albright and waived a hearing. He is being held for grand jury action.

Marriage Licenses

Show Drop In June

LISBON, July 2.—Dan Cupid's records here show a substantial decrease during June, the month of roses and brides, as compared with the same period a year ago.

Bringing to a close the Third Vacation Bible school which has been in session at the First Baptist church for the last three weeks, diplomas will be awarded to 95 members of the school at commencement exercises at 7:30 tonight at the church.

There was an average attendance of 102 at the school, Rev. A. C. Westphal, pastor and director, announced today. The highest enrollment was 120.

Fifty of the 95 diplomas to be awarded tonight will be "gold star" diplomas, signifying that the winners did not miss a day during the session.

Children from other churches took part in the work, seven denominations being represented.

As one of the concluding features of the school, a picnic was held Wednesday afternoon at Centennial park.

CHAMP AND FOE SET FOR TITLE BATTLE FRIDAY

Gate Receipts Short Of $600,000 Expected by Promoters

CLEVELAND, July 2.—The world's heavyweight championship battle between Max Schmeling, title holder, and Young Stribling, American challenger, tomorrow night, may be a whole of a success as a fight, but it appeared today the gate receipts would fall far short of the $600,000 the promoters had hitherto expected.

As Schmeling and Stribling moved into Cleveland for their weighing-in tonight, officials of the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Ohio, promoting the contest, were hoping for clear cool weather tomorrow to stimulate the eleventh-hour ticket sale. Predictions were made that with favorable weather, the receipts will be between $300,000 and $400,000 with an attendance of between 40,000 and 60,000 spectators.

Boxers Get $156,000

If the receipts amount to $300,000 net, the figures will show a very slight profit for the Madison Square Garden Corporation for its promotional venture. It is estimated the expenses of the promotion, exclusive of the boxers' share, will amount to $112,000. Figures on the basis of a $300,000 net gate, the boxers' share will amount to about $156,000 or 52 per cent of the receipts. Schmeling is to receive 40 per cent and Stribling 12 1/2.

Both Schmeling and Stribling completed their assignments in the battle of the ballyhoo yesterday, and started for Cleveland to weigh in at 8:30 p. m. tonight. Stribling and Schmeling are to weigh-in at WTAM, Cleveland radio station, with the National Broadcasting company sending it out on the atmosphere throughout the entire country.

Stribling wound up his training last night without throwing a punch at a sparring partner. Five rounds of work constituted the final public training of the young southerner before he matches his speed, skill and punching power against the champion. Stribling skipped the rope for a round, slugged a heavy bag for a round, shadow-boxed two rounds and wound up with calisthenics. Before he started his work, he weighed 186 pounds. Just the figure he expects to be tomorrow night. The challenger was in high spirits and seemed to be perfectly trained.

Fliers Accorded Rousing Ovation In Gotham Tour

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 1.—New York and millions who are a part of it, gave two tired men today the spectacular sort of welcome which is reserved for spectacular guests.

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, back in the city after girdling the globe in less than nine days, found New York at its noisiest and at the peak of its enthusiasm. Perched on the cushions of an automobile, they made a circuit of the city which probably was only slightly less exciting than the flight itself.

There were crowds all along the route.

Even before the fliers were out of their beds at 9:30 a. m. a crowd had collected around the doors of the Ritz Carlton hotel, their headquarters. When they finally made their appearance in the lobby, remarking that they had slept "fine," they were applauded by a hundred guests. Outside, 2,000 more persons had collected.

PLAN OPENING OF HEALTH CAMP

Miss Ila Kaufman, Aids To Begin Six Weeks' Work July 13

Columbiana county's health camp for undernourished children, located west of Lisbon, is scheduled to open July 13 for a six-week period.

Miss Ila Kaufman, of Shreve, registered nurse, will be in charge of the camp, and Miss Mary Kaufman, her sister, will play director. Mrs. D. S. McCormick of Lisbon, has been engaged to cook.

From 25 to 30 children will be taken care of during the season, according to reports, and will be examined daily by Dr. T. T. Church, county health commissioner, and county nurses.

Funds for the maintenance of this camp are provided through the sale of Christmas seals and by the Kiwanis clubs of the county.

$555.40 Collected By Mayor In Month

Mayor J. M. Davidson's collections for the month of June, from all sources, totaled $555.40.

Fines and costs netted $311.40. The city obtained $240 from licenses and $4 from building permits.

Arrest Lisbon Man

R. Gorsuch of Lisbon, arrested last evening by Patrolman Ralph Stoffer on South Lincoln ave., on charges of driving an automobile without a license and of resisting an officer, is scheduled for a hearing in Mayor J. M. Davidson's court tomorrow.

Dismisses Deputies

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 2.—Sheriff's deputies Al Bridwell and Arthur Oakes today blamed "politics" for their dismissal by Sheriff Maurice Caldwell.

The sheriff said the men were dismissed for the summer months in the interest of economy. Bridwell is a former major league baseball player.

MERCURY SLOWS UP

If there were less of an exciting nature to occupy attention right now, the part trans-Atlantic telephony is playing in the important drama of debt negotiations between the United States and Europe would receive more attention. As it is, the almost instantaneous communication that is piling one development on another with breathtaking rapidity is taken for granted. Comparatively few people realize exactly what it means for President Hoover to be able to communicate privately with Secretary Mellon, or Ambassadors Sackett and Edge in Europe merely by lifting a receiver off a hook. The trans-Atlantic telephone will be firmly established as a means of delivering vitally important diplomatic instructions by the time the negotiations are complete.

Speedier communication with other countries fairly tumbles over itself, so fast it grows. Pictures taken of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty when they landed in Chester, Eng., last Wednesday are being speeded to New York by fast boat. Yet, the two aviators themselves promise to land again at Roosevelt Field after their flight around the world before their pictures are received in this country.

Once, messengers spent months on sailing ships going from one country to another. Then steamships and cables speeded communication. Followed, faster ships, better cable service, and now the trans-Atlantic telephone and the radio, Mercury, the classic symbol of speed, is being forced out of the picture by the dynamo and propeller.

READER'S 16TH BIRTHDAY

The story of the grain reaper is the same one told about every new idea. An idea—laborious construction of a working model—the ridicule of skeptics—disappointments—finally success—the approbation of the crowd—handsome offers—and a place in history.

Cyrus McCormick's father, who had invented numerous labor-saving devices, believed a grain-cutting machine would be practical. He failed in his attempts to construct one, however, leaving the opportunity to his son. In 1831—100 years ago—Cyrus took up the problem, and after careful study constructed a grain-cutting machine used successfully in the late harvest that year.

Even in its first crude state the reaper attracted more intelligent farmers who saw it. Others ridiculed it, unable to comprehend its possibilities. It was many years, of course, before the reaper approached its present perfection, but it has been accepted universally for more than a quarter of a century. Each new model has embodied certain refinements; the great "combines" used in western states are the highest development achieved.

The reaper helped create problems, too. The bright sheaves tumbling rapidly off the carriers released thousands of men from the heavy work of cradling the heavy-headed grain by hand. Many farms were abandoned as it became easier and cheaper to produce wheat. The rolling land of the western states invited enterprising farmers to make them the bread basket of the nation. European markets invited huge exports. These things could not have happened without Cyrus McCormick's grain cutter that could sweep over a vast tract of wheat land in a few days doing the work of dozens of men. Few inventions have affected directly the lives of so many human beings.

The reapers are in the fields again, snipping, bunching and tying grain. They are taken for granted now. One hundred years ago, however, their ancestor was only the crazy contraption of a young farmer who would have been better off, his neighbors said, working than trying to figure out a way to avoid work.

NEW NATIONAL HEROES

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, two modest and capable young men who came from nowhere to fly in a 14,000-mile circle around the North Pole, are the nation's new national heroes. To them goes the generous adulation America offers those who perform extraordinary feats. They can make of it what they choose—use it as a stepping stone to a more permanent kind of renown as Charles A. Lindbergh did, or reap the harvest immediately at hand and retire again into obscurity.

The most engaging aspect of the flight in the splendid manner in which the two men mastered fatigue under the most trying flying conditions imaginable. They have faced danger, have held their lives in their hands for hours at a time, surmounted extreme difficulties, have done everything, in short, to fatigue the human brain and body, and yet have shown few signs of strain. When it is considered that 100 miles of driving on a improved road tires many motorists to the point of weakening irritability, the feat of flying around the world in less than 10 days appears almost superhuman.

The practical results of the trip are small. Proof is made available that it can be done, but there is no reason for doing it, other than the adventure. The trans-Atlantic leg of the flight eventually will be flown regularly by commercial planes, but the Asiatic stages will be traversed by few airplanes for many years to come.

It is in achievements like the flight of Post and Gatty that Americans find a vast store of satisfaction. It is another extremely difficult deed attracting world interest that Americans have performed first. America, consequently, is demonstratively proud and happy. That's the American way.

What Others Say

Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, in his recent baccalaureate sermon, confidently declared to a class of graduates that the "cynic" era is over. He assured them that a decade of criticism has given way to one of construction.

Young folks of the present generation have been prone to criticize and deride traditional authority, customary convention and the received canons of character, he insisted. Those of us who have lived through the last decade can well agree with him. The reactions of the war, the teachings of Karl Marx, the abnormal illusions of a new youth, were responsible for the breaking down of ancient saving barriers of society and religion, as well as constitutional governmental barriers.

It is wholesome and encouraging to believe that we have entered upon a period of reconstruction which will spell disillusionment and tend to the banishment of the present cynical view of life.

Dr. Hibben phrases the new declaration of independence as follows: "I will not be told what I must believe or how I ought to act. I will not accept any idea as true unless it is true for me."

This is well enough in so far as it has served to expose or sweep aside sham, hypocrites, political ineptitude, theological formulas, social and respectable insincerity; but let it be hoped, as Dr. Hibben believes, that this extreme critical period has passed and that we now are entering upon a period of reconstruction of the ideas by which the present decade must live. To build up, not tear down—to create and not destroy—is the key to this educator's philosophy of life. It is not a new one, but a better formula never yet has been offered to man by any sage of the world.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MIAMI, Fla.—Dr. Austrello Athayde, Brazilian journalist, has arrived here for a tour of the United States, in which he will study American industries and tell his people of the manner in which the products they purchase are manufactured.

Judging by the lunar transits, this should be a very active and happy day, with many gestures of gaiety and social festivity. There is likely to be much stirring about, with travel and change, under a favorable Uranian ray. The labor or industry engaged in may have the effect of stability and responsibility, especially in the good graces of elderly persons or institutions. Nevertheless, employment is under an adverse aspect and may give some concern.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which the personal relations and activities may claim paramount attention. Social, domestic and affectional matters may be lively and give much happiness, as well as incite much movement, involving travel, change and new environment. With practical and diligent effort, there may be much solid progress made, but be cautious not to give offense to employers or those in authority. A child born on this day should be industrious, skilful, ingenious and well equipped in social graces.

MIAMI, Fla.—Two Miami men came in from the Everglades recently with a report they had seen a huge snake, at least 15 feet long, 10 inches in diameter, which looked like a log lying across the road. Experts believed it was a Gopher snake, but the discoverers temporarily called it "Glade Snake."

NEW YORK Day by Day

by O.O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 2.—It is axiomatic that the most influential citizen is not only the easiest for the reporter to see but to interview. Austerly slides away at the journalistic approach. Col. Lindbergh, truly and deservedly great, is a notable exception.

Reporters have cooled their heels in the outer offices of suddenly elevated upstarts and been immediately ushered into the presence of Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Chauncey Depew. This courtesy does not exist solely in commercial fields.

It applies to great actors, top-notch authors, poets and painters. On his recent visit Gilbert K. Chesterton won the good will of all the journalists—from ship news crew to the touring correspondents—by his graciousness. And in return he received thoughtful consideration.

Maud Adams would not see reporters but her decisions were amiable. She was never abrupt. If letters were sent asking an interview they were invariably answered politely. It was explained interviews were never granted. Her wishes were respected by reporters and by photographers.

It is the insolvent person who finds the going rough with the newspaper crowd. Once they have been treated discourteously they are like the elephant aggrieved. They never forget. And often this resentment is carried on for years in a conspiracy of silence.

Irvin Cobb's story, "The Thunder of Silence" was based on the actual experience of the life of a Washington statesman. He not only snubbed correspondents but did not treat them fairly in news conferences. He was shunted to oblivion by being completely ignored.

The only vigorous opposition I ever met in interviewing was with a young cub in Dayton, O. My city editor sent me to question a rather prominent citizen who had married and chambered a nifty nautilus for his mother's former parlor maid. At the first question he leapt from his desk, shook me as the terrier does the rat and sent me spinning into a corner. That experience focused all my ambitions on ultimately doing only inside work.

The most agreeable interview I ever had was with the British humorist Jerome K. Jerome. He not only furnished me with a couple of crack anecdotes applicable to the times but when the piece appeared dropped a complimentary note to the publisher about it that won a $2 weekly rise. And did I need it!

Glandular Extracts As Builders

Primitive man believed his courage would be made greater by eating the heart of his enemy.

Today modern medicine advocates the internal use of certain glandular extracts.

In fact, some of the authorities claim that certain glands are capable of controlling age and that others possess powers of rejuvenation. The hopeful scientists think it may become possible to vent the uncomfortable physical changes of advancing life from taking place.

These chemical substances, produced by the glands of the human body, are spoken of as "internal secretions" or "hormones." From these organs, they are carried by the blood to other parts of the body and are used as needed.

These substances have been definitely isolated. They are known to be secreted from certain glands with big names, notably the pineal, pituitary, thyroid, parathyroid, thymus and adrenal glands. In addition, it is known that the pancreas, stomach, upper intestines and other glands secrete similar substances, likewise known as hormones.

In some diseases, there is a deficiency in the secretion of one or more of the hormones. When this happens, there is trouble.

For instance, when the thyroid gland fails to supply the normal amount of its internal secretion, we have an uncomfortable physical condition, spoken of as "myxedema." It is startling to observe the favorable effect of giving an extract of thyroid gland in this disease.

This is only one example of what the administration of a glandular substance by mouth may do to promote at favorable change in the welfare of an individual. I wish space permitted giving you other examples.

Of course, there are numerous claims made that are unauthorized. There is too much unscientific literature on this subject.

Unless your physician recommends or subscribes a certain glandular remedy, you should not take it. It may be of no value whatsoever, or it may be harmful.

SECRET PLACES

By Joan Sutherland

Synopsis of Preceding Installments:

Feodor Staire, attached to the British Embassy in Paris, after serving in Madrid, was wealthy, was determined to make his way in the diplomatic world, was unmarried, and was bored by the modern young girl. On his 36th birthday he was on the Calais train, bound for London, when he met his old friend, Ronald Halkett, who seven months before had married the beautiful Greta Wareham, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham, who lived in Paris. Ronald mentioned his sister-in-law, Toni, but Staire was not interested. Then he was attracted to her when he saw her rescue a little pet dog from beneath a limousine in London and later when he saw her riding in the Row. Soon after her return to Paris, she went on a visit to the United States. In the meantime, Greta had met the Comte Henri D'Arblaye, who although received in the American colony in Paris, did not bear a very good reputation. Toni, who was about 21, met Staire on her return, at a dinner party given in a Paris restaurant. Greta had told Ronald she had a headache and did not wish to go but Toni met her unexpectedly in the cloakroom. Greta told her she had come with D'Arblaye. Toni, who considered herself hard-boiled, danced with Feodor and was instantly attracted to him. When Feodor saw D'Arblaye was a wealthy South American, who pretended to be a Frenchman. They danced again and Staire made an engagement for luncheon the next day in the country. They were engaged when they returned in the evening and Toni asked Feodor to meet her with her mother's party that night at the charity ball at the Opera.

"Of course I'll come," Staire told Toni. "Do you imagine I would stay away if you wanted me? Look out for me near the serious affairs. Do you realize that your mother will be a little surprised to put the matter mildly?"

"It takes a lot to surprise mother where I'm concerned, and she loves Ronnie as if he were her son, and you are Ronnie's closest and oldest friend. She'll be pleased."

"I hope so," he said gravely. "If she does not think I am too old for you, Toni. It's a big step."

"I never could bear boys," Toni retorted. "They're fatuous, they're raw. And I am marrying you, not mother—Besides, just now Greta is taking up all the maternal attention."

"She's being rather indiscreet—nothing in it, you know, but she's so lovely that she's conspicuous."

"She is lovely," he agreed, and he told her his last night's anxiety for Ronald coming back into his mind. As if she guessed his thoughts Toni spoke in her old impetuous manner.

"Last night I wouldn't have let you know, but today, now, it's different. You'll be in the family. Greta is upsetting Ronald by going about so much with D'Arblaye. Last night I pretended I didn't know. Ronnie was furious last night."

"It's a pity," Staire agreed, but said no more, and as he drew up the car outside No. 36, he forgot Ronald and Ronald's affairs in view of his own immediate concerns.

It was almost the first time he had been inside Toni's home, and as the butler, grave and elderly and stout, let them in, Staire realized anew what a beautiful setting it made for the woman who was her mother. The salon, a long spacious room with two large windows, each leading from a little raised platform that ran along that side of the room, was full of the afternoon sunshine, and the shadow of dancing leaves from the trees outside lay across the Aubusson carpet; a lovely room to shape and color, and filled with lovely things. The dining-room Toni showed him was beyond the double doors of glass at one end, and at the other, on one side of the stone fireplace, a door led into her mother's dressing-room. Across the wide hall was a library and her own bedroom, and beyond again other rooms and various corridors, the whole apartment spacious and beautiful.

Milady was just back from her luncheon engagement. Henri, the butler informed Toni. She would be disengaged in one moment, and Toni seated herself on the arm of Feodor's chair and blew smoke rings into the air with a little gesture of defiance—not that defiance was needed—for Lady Alice, who knew far more about Staire than her daughter, was very delightful to him, and did not even warn him against Toni's impetuosity—a forbearance that made Toni turn on her swiftly when Staire had gone a few minutes later.

"Mother! Why didn't you tell me I was rushing my fancies?" Lady Alice stood still for a moment, then she came across the room and put a hand on either side of Toni's face.

"Because for once, odd though it may sound, I do not think you are, Toni dear." Her voice was very gentle, her eyes sympathetic. "You love this man, I think," and at Toni's wordless nod, she held her very close for a minute then released her and drew back.

"I'm delighted dear, and Feodor Staire is a most attractive man. Now sit down and tell me your plans, if you have any."

Toni had hardly finished talking before Greta strolled in, nodded to them both, and said: "May I use the telephone, mother?" and strolled away again to the library where the instrument was; whereupon Toni, suddenly remembering Feodor's promise about the ball at the Opera, determined to ask her if she were going, and did so when she returned.

"Yes; with the Delvilles," Greta's tone was nonchalant. "Why?"

"Is Ronnie?"

"No. He's busy tonight. You're going, I suppose?"

"Yes. Mr. Her's got a party."

"Who?"

"The Hardwickes and Col. James, and the Comte and Comtesse de Verilane and Feodor Staire."

"Feodor Staire," Greta echoed, and for an appreciable second she stood quite still, then stooping took a cigarette from a box and lit it.

"I didn't know you knew Feodor Staire until last night," she said.

"Is he—attached—already?"

Toni ignored the little sneer that came so strangely from that lovely mouth; she could afford to do so.

"More or less," she answered, with elaborate carelessness; "more, in the near future, I hope. I am going to marry him."

"What?"

"This time there was no mistaking Greta's amazement, for she swung round and stared at her sister.

"You're joking!"

"Why?"

"You don't know him. It's absurd—"

"It's true. You're being absurd, Greta. Why shouldn't I marry Feodor Staire?"

Toni's voice held a note of anger, and Lady Alice interposed to save further unpleasantness.

"It is quite true, Greta. After all, we know a good deal about Feodor Staire from Ronald, and I have met him several times in the past year. I am quite satisfied."

Greta pressed out the half-smoked cigarette and looked up at her sister.

"You are a fast worker," she said.

"I hope you won't find it work for nothing."

"Which means you hope I will—ch, well, what do I care? See you tonight!" And pursuing her lips to a whistle and doing elaborate Charleston steps Toni quitted the room, leaving Lady Alice alone with her elder daughter; whereupon Greta dropped her slender length into a chair.

"Toni's impossible! The idea of her marrying Feodor Staire is preposterous! He'll be tired of her in a month."

"My dear Greta," for once Lady Alice's tone was severe, "your constant criticism of Toni only reacts on yourself. Is Ronald so content with your latest—craze—that you can throw stones at your sister?"

The color deepened faintly in Greta's face.

"I fail to see why you should consider D'Arblaye a craze. He dances well and he is amusing. Why should Ronald object?"

"I think he does, and I certainly do, although it is not exactly my affair now. D'Arblaye is not the right sort of man."

"Oh—absurd!" Greta's impatience passed the bounds of good manners. "Don't be ridiculous, mother. He's a man of the world. That's all. Do you expect a saint?"

Yet an hour or two later when Ronald—detained by his work in the office of L'Etoile, Gerald Astley's paper—telephoned to his flat in Passy, Greta's answer was charmingly reassuring.

"Oh no, darling. The Delvilles, yes. D'Arblaye may be there—he's usually at the big shows, isn't he? but I'm with the Delvilles' party. You need not be in the least jealous. Stupid—you know I adore you."

Ronald hung up the receiver with a sigh quickly checked, and went on with his work; but he knew Greta, her wilfulness, the danger of her great beauty, and her absorption in herself. He was not afraid she would go too far with any of the fascinated men who hovered around her; she was innately cold, and an adept at taking much and giving little; none knew her better than he how difficult it was ever to rouse her to any real warmth, or to move her either by passion or anger. Nothing gave her quite so much pleasure as the contemplation of herself and her social successes. She had no: the temperament that is carried away by generous response or unwise warmth of feeling; Ronald had no need to feel real jealousy, but what he did feel was a soreness that she could so easily go against his wishes, and a sick disappointment that she, so lovely, so thoroughbred, could enjoy the society of such a man as Henri D'Arblaye.

Toni opened her eyes one morning about a week later and lay in comfortable, drowsy luxury between waking and sleeping, wondering why she felt so extraordinarily happy. She had been used, this last week, to waking up happy, but today seemed even better than usual, and she wondered why, and then suddenly remembered that tonight was to be the big dinner party that her mother was giving to celebrate her engagement, and that on the morrow they were leaving Paris for Lady Alice's house in Brittany. Toni was very modern; she adored Paris, she adored the excitement of town life; but she also adored the chateau in the park above the river, with its terraces, its garden, its animals and the delightful house-parties. It would be so new, so extraordinarily wonderful this year because Feodor would come there. Feodor and she would wander about those lovely gardens together, and, at the thought, Toni suddenly sat up, tossing back her fair, short hair.

"I believe I'm old-fashioned," she said aloud in a tone of horror.

"I'm sentimental, I'm terribly in love, I intend to be a good wife.... oh damn! I must be getting odd, or what's the matter? Does everybody change when they fall in love?"

Her voice, which had been louder than she intended, aroused the attention of her maid, who was in the next room, and as Marie came in, smiling at Toni, who she worshipped, she said: "Did Mademoiselle call me?"

Toni shook her head.

"No I didn't call you, Marie; but it's time I got up. What is the time?"

Half-past nine! Oh, mon Dieu! And I've got a dozen things to do. My hair's got to be washed at eleven. My bath quickly, Marie! Why didn't you wake me before?"

"Milady said you were to be left

Stocks Advance Cautiously; Trading Generally Quiet

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 2.—Stocks advanced cautiously today after a little hesitancy. Trading was quiet, for professional and other traders were reluctant to increase their activity while the Paris debt negotiations were still in an inconclusive stage, but the market continued to act as though it expected an agreement would be reached.
U. S. Steel, after sagging nearly a point, rallied to 104½. They were rallies of two points or more in Worthington Pump, Johns-Manville, Beatrice Creamery and Caterpillar Tractor. Steels, as a group, improved and most of the trading favorite moved up at least one. In general Rand jumped 7. Wootworth was quiet.

Y., will broadcast the scrap in German and Spanish.

Two of the pronounced song hits from the "Third Little Show," current Broadway musical production, a brand new song of the type best crowned, and a wide selection of popular favorites will be presented by Leo Resman and his orchestra and associate artists at 8:30 over the WEAF-NBC hookup.

J. P. McEvoy's sketches, "The Adventures of Dixie Dugan," will be heard over WABC and Columbia every Friday during the broadcast of Lowell Thomas. The premiere performance will be broadcast from 8 to 8:45.

THE DAY In Sports

Young Stribling, American heavyweight, finished his training here last night in preparation for his world's championship battle with Max Schmeling in the Cleveland stadium Friday evening.

For six weeks the big boy from the south has been working in the big amusement park, fitting himself for his first chance at the world's heavyweight boxing crown. Ten years in the game, during which he fought through the ranks of all classes, placed him at the top of his profession. Countless battles have taught him the tricks of the trade and the ability to give and take it. Experience both in and out of the ring has developed him into a man ready to face the world and all it has to offer or demand.

Workouts Impressive

The workouts here have impressed boxing critics and mere fans with Stribling's ability inside the ropes. He isn't irritable and he isn't nervous. He has had three weeks of time to condition himself for the title bout. But he worked longer to satisfy the boxing writers who wanted to see him, and for the fans who crowded into the park here night after night.

Stribling is ready. He isn't over-trained. He isn't irritable and he isn't nervous. He has had three weeks of time to condition himself for the title bout. But he worked longer to satisfy the boxing writers who wanted to see him, and for the fans who crowded into the park here night after night.

Regardless of what various writers have said, Stribling has no set plan for the championship scrap. Of course, if he gets a chance to clip the German he'll do it in a hurry. But Stribling plans to campaign as the occasion demands. He wants to win in a hurry—no doubt about that. And his training camp tactics show that he has a pretty fair idea of what blows he feels will bother Maxie. A lightning left jab and that famous left hook have been perfected as never before. A swishing right to the kidneys has caused many a sparring mate to hold on.

Wants To Land K. O.

The dream nearest Stribling's heart is to win the championship by a knockout. He realizes Schmeling's is tough but has confidence in his own hitting ability. He likes George Blake as the referee; he likes the site for the bout; he is satisfied with his condition.

Young Stribling, the American challenger, is ready.

Klein On Hitting Rampage As Phils Trounce Cubs, 11-3; Triple Play Features Clash

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Phillies may not be headed any place in particular in the National league race but leave it to that bunch of hard hitting youngsters to produce some of the greatest thrills of the game.

Yesterday they defeated the Chicago Cubs, 11 to 6, which has been done before, but the manner in which they accomplished the feat was new. Chuck Klein blasted his way to the top of the league batting averages with his 21st home run, a triple, a double and a single, while three of his teammates—Mallin, Fiberg and Bartell—were pulling the first triple play of the National league season.

Giants Nose Out Cards

Philadelphia's victory over the Cubs featured the National league program which included the Giants' 4 to 3 defeat of the Cards, the conquering of the Reds by Brooklyn, 3 to 1, and the Pirates' second victory of the series with the Braves by the score of 4 to 1.

Home runs played an important part in the Giants' triumph. Johnny Vezet's tenth circuit drive with Travis Jackson on base put the Giants out in front, while Lindstrom's four bagger added another run in the sixth. Pepper Martin kept the Cards in the battle with a home run.

The Reds outlit the Robins, 10 to 8, but Joe Shaute tightened up in the pinches while the Robins held to the advantage given by Babe Herman's home run in the first inning.

U. S., British Golfers Get Off Today In Annual Competition

By ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor

TOLEDO, O., July 2—Old man par and old sol, his newly acquired ally in the business of making things tougher for the golfing clan, furnished a blistering battle ground today for the first round of the United States open championship.

Par has been knocked down for the count a number of times in practice in the inferno of invertebrate it has been manifesting increased resistance, with the cooperation of the alphas off the fairways and the dripping onslaughts of the heat wave, which scored a 97 in the shade yesterday.

Par Conceded Edge

Thus fortified, the old man of the links was conceded a slight edge over the field of 144 contestants slated to play 18 holes today, another round Friday with the ranks out.

BATTINS RALLY, TRIM SEBRING TEAM HERE, 11-10

Score 8 Runs In Last 3 Frames; Early Stars In Relief Role

Battin All Stars pulled one out of the fire last night when, at Centennial park in a special engagement with Sebring, the Quaker combine, trailing by seven markers at the end of the fifth, rallied in the sixth to score three times and delivered the final punch in the eighth with a five-run onslaught to nose out the visitors, 11 to 10.

The Battin stars were outlit, 13 to 8, but those bingles the Quakers garnered in the sixth and the eighth counted for enough runs to cop.

Camp was the Battin slab selection but the Sebringites got to his slabs for 11 safeties and 19 runs in the first three frames.

Early went in as relief twirler and pitched steady ball for five and one-third cantos, during which the visitors got but two safe swats.

Sartick and Miller led the social sluggers, the former with three raps and the latter with two. R. Lee, Rinali, Denmark and T. Lee clouded well for the opposition.

NEW PLYMOUTHS
TESTED RIGIDLY

Driven Miles Upon Miles
In Desert Heat and
Mountain Chills

In addition to laboratory experiments to test the reliability, sturdiness and general excellence of these Plymouths with Floating Power, being shown this week for the first time at Chrysler, De Soto and Dodge dealers here, Plymouth test engineers proved these points by submitting the car to every trial known to automotive science.

Tests Are Made
At the engineering laboratories, parts such as radiators, exhaust pipes, springs, rubber mountings and the assembled cars were shaken, pounded, twisted or rotated literally thousands upon thousands of times by specially designed testing equipment to disclose any weaknesses. Then, more than a dozen experimental cars were sent out with highly trained test drivers, who put thousands of miles on them in and around Detroit and on the steep mountain grades near Ligonier, Pa.

As a fitting climax to this comprehensive series of tests, the first two production cars were sent west on a 10,000-mile journey, in which every condition of weather and road that a motorist will encounter was experienced.

From Detroit these new Plymouths went to the alkali wastes of Death Valley, 333 feet below sea level and bounded by the Panamint Amargosa and Funeral mountain ranges. Not a breath of air stirred in this forgotten region and the normal temperature is around 134 degrees Fahrenheit.

From Heat to Chills
In this uninhabited, difficult terrain, the new Plymouths were driven mile upon mile, in order to confirm engineering specifications for cooling, proper functioning of the water and oil circulation systems, adequate crankcase ventilation and proper air cleaner design for excluding the alkali dust with its penetrating and destroying abrasive action on moving parts.

From the intense heat of this desert waste, the new Plymouths climbed the ten-mile grade up to the heights of nearby Mt. Wilson. Thus, within the space of a few hours, these cars were required to function in the 134-degree heat of Death Valley and in the 40-degree chill of the mountain peak above the clouds.

Pattern 2109 makes up beautifully in georgette, chiffon, voile, dimity, batiste or flat crepe. Obtainable only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeannette Young Norton

Memorable Sweet Corn
"Best corn I ever ate was on my father's farm," began the corn-lover reminiscently. "Why can't women cook corn the way our mothers did?"

But that's one culinary lapse that can't be fastened to the much-maligned cook. Corn-on-cob is one of those foods that should be cooked and served within an hour after picking. That's why the farm corn of so many childhoods is the memorable, best-in-the-world corn. Mother put the kettle on and when the water boiled she demanded that someone go out and pick the corn. Corn begins to lose its sweetness and flavor the moment it is taken off the stalk. No matter how fine in appearance or size, any corn that has been traveling away from its native hearth for a week or two cannot have the fine flavor of the freshly picked variety.

proved methods of rapid shipping from market to consumer, even the city dweller has a chance of getting corn almost as good as the resident of the rural districts. Choose corn carefully. The ears should be well-filled to the tip end, with few missing kernels, and they should look milky. Glossy kernels, or a few withered germs, are a sign of stale corn—not worth cooking.

To prepare corn-on-cob, first set the water to boil and use plenty of it. Meanwhile, remove husk, stem and silk. Throw into boiling water and cook only until tender. No general timetable can be given, as it depends on the size and age of the corn. But it should be tested for tenderness with a pointed knife every few minutes, and removed the moment it is tender. Some cook corn for only five to eight minutes—but it may take longer. The fact is, corn-on-cob needs watching, and under no circumstances should it be overcooked. As soon as tender, remove from water, pile onto a napkin in a deep platter and keep hot this way until ready to serve—which should be immediately.

TARNOV, NEB.—St. Michael's church here has celebrated its golden jubilee. The present structure was dedicated in 1910. Rt. Rev. Joseph P. Rummel, bishop of Omaha, officiated at the jubilee exercises.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

Washing The Caprets and Rugs

Any good rug may be cleaned by the soap-and-water method, with a few cautions. First, make sure it is a closely woven rug, of such good quality that a soap treatment won't injure colors. Second, it must be remembered that washing rugs means scrubbing them with soap and water, not immersing them in a bath.

The rug can be placed on top of a firm table. Make a thick suds of white soap and lukewarm water. Dip a stiff brush in the solution and scrub a small section at a time. Rinse with clear, warm water by dipping a large cloth in it and gently absorbing the suds from the rug. Renew both suds and clear water frequently. The rug should not be scrubbed with dark suds. When the entire rug is so treated, hang up to dry, right side up. If the rug has been carefully cleaned the back will not be wringing wet—merely damp.

When thoroughly dry the rug can be given a once-over with a clean, stiff bristle brush to bring the nap into shape again.

Before washing any kind of rug or carpet it should be given a very thorough cleaning with vacuum cleaner, carpet sweeper or broom so that all the surface dust is completely dislodged. The better this preliminary job is done the less arduous will be the moist scrubbing later.

Rug rugs can stand a complete bath, and a trip to the commercial laundry is not expensive and won't hurt the average rug. However, if it must be done at home it can be immersed in the washing machine, or if that is not available then the same scrub brush method that is used for other rugs will do. As soaking doesn't hurt rag rugs they can be rinsed easily by throwing pails of water over them in the tub. Do not wring out. Hang outdoors while dripping wet, but well rinsed and they will dry in good shape.

Reunited After 27 Years

A touching reunion, but a happy one, took place on the S. S. Portland at San Francisco when a 60-year-old Russian woman met two of her sons for the first time in 27 years. She had spent years trying to get a passport from the Russian government, saw her husband die of disappointment, and after great suffering arrived in the U. S. to find two grown-up sons who were mere lads when she last saw them. The mother, Mrs. Lazar Lachman, and her two sons, Maurice (left) and Alexander Lachman, are shown above.

MOVIES

COMING ATTRACTION

At The State

The same qualifications which made Richard Dix's portrayal of "Yancey Cravat" memorable in the epochal "Cimarron," carry him to equally great heights in the dramatic "Young Donovan's Kid," the coming attraction at the State theater.

As "Jim Donovan" gang leader in this adaptation of Rex Beach's "Big Brother," Dix gives an inspired performance. Just as the personality of the star was made to order for "Yancey Cravat," so the character of Donovan must have been drawn from the star's own rugged character, so perfectly does he fit into the part of this man of gangland.

Jackie is cast as Midge Murray, waif of the streets who is entrusted to the care of Donovan, and who ultimately assists in the reformation of the gangster. The fact that Jackie successfully steps from his high comedy "Skippy" characterization to the dramatic demands in this role marks him as a sterling actor.

TODAY'S FEATURES

At The State

"Gold Dust Gertie" with Winnie Lightner and Olson and Johnson is at the State today.

Winnie Lightner, who is living up to the record she made as Mabel, in "Gold Diggers of Broadway," is more ludicrously likeable as Gertie, than in any of her other comedies. She is shown in violent pursuit of two newswomen, who have been former husbands, and owe her alimony.

Olsen and Johnson, as may be imagined, are the grooms in question. They are first seen in the heyday of their honeymoon which is unceremoniously upset, when the twin wives discover the duns Winnie sends for her pay. The wives, played with a keen sense for comedy, are portrayed by Dorothy Christy and Vivian Oakland.

"TRADER HORN"

At The Grand

"Trader Horn," much heralded filmization of the remarkable book which became a best seller overnight, will be shown four days at the grand theater.

This picture, filmed over a period of months in the African jungles, is believed to set a precedent for the unusual and thrilling. At the risk of their lives, Harry Carey, Edwina Booth, Duncan Renaldo, Olive Golden and hordes of natives employed as "extras" depicted the exciting scenes which were so vividly described by Aloysius Horn.

Sequences include a weird native death dance, preceding the roasting to death of alien captives; a battle to death of lions fighting over a slaughtered prey; a breathtaking closeup of a lion pierced to the brain by the expert hurling of a staff; the snapping up of a native by hungry crocodiles; and hundreds of "shots" revealing strange creatures of the Dark Continent in intimate action.
